tion in the mysterious disappearance of Anne Straw, 20-yearold Smith College junior who is to inherit $7,000,000 on her 27th birthday, was explored by authorities at Holderness, N. H., as state police dragged a nearby lake in fear she may have drowned. Miss Straw, daughter of a Manchester, N. H., banker, disappeared from the summer home of her parents after the family retired. (International Soundphoto)

HOLDERNESS, N. H., July 25—(A)—Search of the waters of Little Squam Lake was resumed today by state troopers, a driver and volunteers in a widespread search for Miss Anne Straw, 20 year old daughter of one of the state's wealthiest families.

The girl vanished last Monday and her father, H. Ellis Straw, president of the Amoskeag National Bank of Manchester, expressed fear she had drowned.

Armco Hikes Steel Prices

MIDDLETOWN, July 25-(A)-The American Rolling Mill Company today was the first member of the steel family to boost basic steel prices. President Charles R. Hook announced last night that Armco intended to meet rising costs by $6 and $7 more a ton. Revised prices, which Hook said became effective yesterday, quoted a basic figure of $57 a ton for hot rolled steel compared with $50 previously and $71 against $64 for cold rolled steel, the two finished steel grades

Hook asserted that Armco increased prices "to realize a reasonable, although relatively low, er zooming production costs.

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON, July 25—(AP)— Here's an outline of what this country is doing at this time in American history with atomic

You, an ordinary citizen, can't imagine it all. Few people can, unless they're high in the government or are scientists. The work is too huge, too scatsketchy because there still is so much secrecy surrounding the development of atomic energy. It is pieced together from the report which the government's atomic energy commission made to Congress last night. This commission, which makes such a report twice a year, is the boss of atomic energy and everything connected with it in this

Facing A Big Question

In a good city such as Washington C. H. and in a fine county like Fayette, where most of the population is composed of old fashioned native American stock, the problem of international relations in a crucial time like the present, receives more consideration from the thinking public than many people imagine.

Fayette County did its full share in the last great war. The people here under no circumstances like to think of another such catastrophe in the near future. Yet all realize that international conditions are far from satisfactory.

In nearly every group where current events are discussed the attitude of Russia is brought into the conversation. The big question in everyone's mind seems to be can we have peace in Europe and elsewhere by ignoring Russia. What most everyone is concerned about is trying to determine what are the true facts and how much of the vast volume of news stories, magazine articles, radio comments constantly coming our way is entirely authen-

According to many reports which most of us have heard, there has been nothing since the recent war in the field of international relations comparable to the recently opened Paris conference on European economic recovery. This conference began in a spirit of gravity, as well it might. But there also was evident a spirit of friendliness and a unanimity of purpose that have been absent too long.

The reason for this was clearly evident. Russia was not represented—Russia, with her reported tactics of opposition, obstruction, delay and general trouble-making. Without a Soviet delegation, the 16 governments present were able to make a start at doing a job which they all agreed must be done.

The conference is not a truly European meeting without Russia and her satellites. Considerable industry and much agricultural land which are part of the European economic picture do not figure in the Paris plans. But one could almost get a feeling of relief from reading reports of the conference. Russia had dropped the other shoe. Despite the serious aspects of her withdrawal, the air seemed clearer now that the threatened East-West split had

The rest of the world got along pretty well without the Soviets in pre-1934 days, and perhaps it can again.

Russia's ban on normal relations between these Baltic and Balkan nations and their non-Communist neighbors will not assist Europe's recovery. Neither will the paralysis of Germany, if it continues much longer. At the same time the Soviet Union has acquired some economic responsibilities along with its political successes.

Russia is economicaly weaker than in 1939. Yet she denies her satellites assistance from the United States and the rest of Europe, she will have to make it up to | the same purpose.

The so-called Molotov plan has some participants who are obviously reluctant. The Marshall plan has the hearty cooperation of 15 western European nations and Turkey. These nations, at Paris, have denied any threat to individual sovereignty. They have left the door open for Russia and other countries to come in. They have agreed on a program of self-help to supplement American assistance. They have not overlooked the United Nations in their planning.

All this gives the United States a political advantage to match Russia's similar advantage in the east. But here again there are economic problems. In America's case, too, promising and delivering are not the same things. As yet this country does not know how much help it can afford to give. Nor is there assurance that a bipartisan foreign economic policy will back up the bipartisan political support of the Marshall plan and turn promises into Until those two questions are settled there is no room for any blithe assurance that non-Communist Europe can recover and grow strong without Russia.

A new directive has been issued by the state, war and navy departments. It emphasizes the fact that this country will not keep on supplying funds to be used in paying German reparations. Every effort will be made to make Germany self-supporting and productive, always keeping in mind the fact that production must be restrained in lines leading toward militarism. Imposition from the outside of any form of government, whether democratic or communistic, is opposed, but an army of occupation is considered necessary for an indefinite length of time.

This program should be heartening to But far more wonderful it is the German people, and agreeable to Americans. We shall be freed of part of our burden, and the Germans can use in constructive ways some of the energy they have been expending in grumbling and conniving.
